

On 05/08/2021 10:27 PM Mary Dee <simply_good_woman@yahoo.com> wrote:

I found the video here just now and am copying and pasting my comment below it.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yZnQdd4EOAA>

Mary Wolfe

1 second ago

Recently, I was made aware of the falling away from a former sister who was also shunned to leave SDR. She let me know that you and several others have also left. I have been looking for you and the others and now have found you. There were many tales told about me and not once was I asked whether I did the things I was accused of - not once. (I was shocked to later find out things I was supposed to have done!). I was told that they declared a Titus 3:10 on me - that I was a "heretic". That, too, is not true - along with the great numbers that have left since I have left. There was no proper Matt. 18 done toward me - I was accused in front of everyone and was not able to find out what I supposedly did "wrong". One sister even told me I was "vile, exhausting, and drained their blood" (YES, I still have the screen shots of this!) (For example, I was accused of cussing. I said omg to someone ONE time - was corrected - but did not realize I was "labeled" throughout the whole time just from that one mistake!)

God shakes us. Instead of shaking me out of the faith, He placed me with another like-minded ministry. I learned more in 4 months with them than the 20 years I knew Nic. I have bit my tongue and not attacked him and what they did to me, but I cried many a day because of it. It took a year for the hurt and pain and bitterness toward what they did to me to heal. Even then, I try my best not to speak ill of them.

God saw the cries of my heart. He heard the anguish of my soul. He shook me out of this ministry that was HARMING me and placed me with people who saw me as HE saw me. God removed me from a ministry of people who saw me as satan saw me. What a transformation of my life, my spirit, my joy since I left!

Before leaving - I asked Nic if he still had a teachable spirit. Of course he could no longer see that he was not examining himself. I then blocked him, you, and many of the brethren (some who falsely accused me of things and some who did not) as my hurt over their betrayal was too deep. God gave me another shepard to look over my soul - a soul that by then was filled with decades of anger and bitterness and pain. I was trying to come out of it, but that ministry only saw the surface. They never sought deeper to the soul that was crying out for God. That ministry failed me. But God did not. He removed me (and others since) from something that no longer was His.

I am sorry I had to block you from email. During that time, anyone associated with them God did not want me to fellowship with. When I learned that you and others left, I was joyful and wanted to find you and ask your forgiveness for anything I may have done to hurt you.

Ironically, recently, I came in contact with the very sister who called me "vile" and other things. I told her that Nic did not have a teachable spirit any more - hence one of the reasons he was losing his flock. And I am surprised at how many have left.

I have subscribed now! I will try to keep up with ya. I am so busy with my new (and very much beloved) brethren, but I am fed by others and now will include you :)

Mary

----- Original message -----

From: Mary Dee <simply_good_woman@yahoo.com>

Date: Sun, May 9, 2021, 10:53 PM

To: Craig@SSRemnant.org

Subject: Re: Stopping in to say Hello

Thank you for writing and giving me more information. I will check out the site (as it is, I am on the page right now and as I have a moment or 2, am going down the page).

I do wonder if there is paranoia in Nic? Because one of the things I heard was that I was "stalking" someone. I was shocked! I did no such thing. But then I thought, toward the end I would try to contact Fran by email. When she did not respond, I waited a couple of days, then wrote her again in case she did not get my first one. I would wait again for a bit before writing again. It got to the point that she refused to answer my emails and I was trying to find out what was going on. If she had an offense with me, please talk to me. That was the ONLY time I kept on with anyone - and if that is what Nic was referring to as "stalking", then he had a strange conception to its meaning. His wife did not give me the courtesy of a reply, nor treated me as a Christian sister to acknowledge my pain over her sudden betrayal and lack of helping me to understand what happened and if I did anything, to rectify it. (and no, I was not ever verbally abusive trying to talk to Fran)

Anyway, I no longer have Facebook and so therefore can not get on. But if you load your sermons on YT (or Rumble or Bitchute) I can look at them. I do attend online Sabbath Services.

I don't mind your sharing what I said. I first wrote the below in the comment box of your video, but just cut it and sent it straight to you. It was Sister Eleana who made me aware of what is going on after I left. She has been working on a website about it. I know she moved close by Nic and stayed with Leigh Ann for a bit, but then something happened and she left. They told her some pretty awful things about me.

As for when I left - before hand, the Lord had brought another ministry to my attention and I had been attending the online service with them. I had Nic's chat up, but I had silenced it as I was listening to the other ministry. When it came down to Nic emailing me and attacking me, I was shaking! He did not ask me to leave. Instead he wanted me to come to the chat room so they could reprimand me. I was "What did I do? What is going on?". There was NO indication that I was "in trouble". I had other brethren who were very cold and distant with me and I had asked what was going on. They were whispering about me behind my back - this I knew - because the one sister who called me vile said they had a meeting about me and that was what they "determined". Because of their behavior, my reactions was one of extreme frustration and I became more and more despondent - which they viewed as "wicked". It was no use telling them that I was hurting and by their behavior, I was seeing God as someone who hated me and did not want me. That is a HORRIBLE feeling.

You were not part of any of their groups which gathered against me and whispered their "ideas and thoughts" about me - pretending to be led by God. God is not vicious. One thing I noticed about them all was that if they think you did one little thing wrong (in THEIR mind, not in truth), they would go tattle telling to Nic. That was one of the main reasons that I wondered if Nic was paranoid some time back because he had to know EVERYTHING in case someone was going to attack him. I never did. Not at all.

Anyway, I refused Nic as he was coming after me due to what others said and he did not ask me FIRST my side of anything. He assumed what they said was true. They never gave me a chance. When Nic kept on and on, I finally blocked him because by that time I was so upset and stressed. I thank God that I had the ministry he led me to so that I could be consoled. I never told them what Nic and them did. But they knew I was hurting. They gently and lovingly walked with me during those many months of pain and showed me the true spirit of the Love of Jesus.

Nic thought to accuse me of Titus 3:10 and said I was like Korah. I NEVER did anything to question him or his ministry! God shook me out of Nic's ministry into another where they were worshiping Him and not themselves. I did not tell Nic that I had been led to another ministry. God knew what was happening and had a place ready for me for when it did. I did not turn my back on the church. I remained in the church, but not Nic's church.

Oh, I am sure you have heard quite a lot. I am glad that I can now contact you. I don't know any of the others that left after me except Sister Eleana. I have talked to Chase and Justice, Mark, and a few others who left before me (even going with them to a flea market in a close by city one day and passing out tracts and such).

I am just starting to watch one of your playlists about the covid.